

Mass. Technology Leadership Council Recognized Area Companies

October 19, 2007

Boston Business Journal

The Massachusetts Technology Leadership Council gave out its 2007 Technology Leadership awards Thursday night, highlighting the best and brightest in the technology industry.

The corporate winners include:

- Open Pages, enterprise applications
- Reva Systems, communications and infrastructure
- Communispace, consumer technology
- InnoCentive and NeuroLogica, innovation
- EMC Corp., Barrett Distribution Centers and Jordan's Furniture, user/implementer

Individuals winning awards include:

- Doug Levin, Black Duck Software, CEO of the Year
- John Halamka, Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center, CIO of the Year
- Kenneth Kuenzel, Convergence, CTO of the Year
- Keith Kocho, Extend Media, Emerging Executive of the Year
- David Weinberger, Berkman Center for Internet & Society at Harvard Law School, and Linda Plano, Massachusetts Technology Transfer Center, Mover and Shaker of the Year

More than 180 nominations were generated this year, which the Council's Board of Trustees reviewed to select 57 finalists. A small group of leaders in the state technology industry reviewed the finalists' applications and selected the 15 winners.

"The winners of our 2007 Technology Leadership Awards highlight the creativity and success of companies and individuals that define and exemplify our technology community," said Mass TLC president Joyce Plotkin in a statement.